How Do The ERS Systems Work?

The Bright Choice Personal Response System is designed to signal for help when you need it. Each ERS system consists of a Lifeline base unit and a small waterproof Personal Transmitter. The transmitter can be worn like a pendant around the neck, on the wrist or on a belt clip. When the transmitter button is pressed the system calls for help through the base unit which is connected to your telephone line. Within seconds after you press the button, a trained operator will see your vital statistics displayed on their computer screen. They will talk to you through the Lifeline base unit and will send for help if you need it.

The system is able to amplify your voice, so you can be heard even if you are not near the base unit. If the operator does not hear anything, help will be sent immediately

IMD.2 Personal Medication System

Keeping up with a lot of prescriptions can be a real challenge. And when you are caring for an older parent or friend, it can be difficult to be sure every dose is taken on time. There may be one set of pills and vitamins in the morning. Different doses in the afternoon and evening, and still other pills before bed. Now there's an easier way to manage all those pills--- automatically. With a simple, reliable dispensing system that fits on a kitchen countertop. The IMD.2 Personal Medication System.
